March 7, 2008

This is in response to your letter of January 13, 2008, regarding an electronic list of "high profile" or "celebrity" records held in the vault at NPRC.

Enclosed is a CD containing a PDF file with the name, vault registry number, service number (if applicable), and biography for each record.

Some of the organizational records contained social security numbers and/or sensitive personal information which could be injurious to the veteran, the veteran's family or a third party named in the record. We have redacted or withheld that information in accordance with the personal privacy exemption of the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), U.S.C.552 (b) (6).

If you consider this an adverse response under the FOIA, you may appeal by writing, within 35 days of receipt of this letter, to the Deputy Archivist (ND), National Archives at College Park, 8601 Adelphi Road, College Park, Maryland 20740-6001, and explain why you think our response does not meet the requirements outlined in the FOIA. Both the appeal letter and the envelope should be marked "Freedom of Information Act Appeal," and you should refer to our request number and include a copy of your original request.

A 12-man Special Forces Reconnaissance Team was inserted into the jungle with orders to gather intelligence about enemy activity. The team fell under heavy enemy fire and requested extraction. Three helicopters attempted a rescue, but were turned back by intense enemy fire. Benavidez was monitoring the operation via radio when the helicopters returned to base. He voluntarily boarded an aircraft to assist another extraction attempt. He ordered the aircraft to a clearing, then jumped out and ran about 75 meters under enemy fire to aid the trapped team. On his way he was shot in his face, head, and right leg. Despite his wounds, he carried or dragged half of the wounded crew to the aircraft while providing protective fire for the aircraft. He then ran to the dead team leader and gathered the body as well as all the classified documents the leader had. He was at this time shot in the abdomen and hit with grenade fragments in his back. The helicopter crashed when the pilot was killed and Benavidez aided the wounded out of the overturned aircraft and positioned them in a defensive perimeter. He moved among them, providing water, ammunition, first aid and the will to live. He directed air strikes to suppress enemy fire and allow for another extraction attempt. Once again, he was shot in the leg. Despite all of his wounds he helped load his comrades into the second helicopter. He was wounded a few more times and killed at least three enemy soldiers who tried to attack his team and the helicopter. His actions ensured the collection of all classified material as well as saving the lives of at least eight men.

V400 008	Boyington, Gregory	5254	WWII Medal of Honor awarded, believed at the time, posthumously for actions in the Central Solomons area from September 12, 1943 to January 3, 1944. Boyington led 24 fighters in an attempt to disrupt Japanese shipping, devastate shore installations and enemy aerial forces. His Medal of Honor citation credits him with 26 downed Japanese planes, some report only 22. Boyington had served in the Marines prior to the war, but resigned to join Chennault's "Flying Tigers" in China. While there, he shot down 6 Japanese craft, however, a difference of opinion caused him to leave the Tigers with a dishonorable discharge. He re-enlisted in the Marine Corps after Pearl Harbor with difficulty due to his reputation as a undisciplined brawler. He was assigned a squadron of pilots who would become known as the "Black Sheep" partly because they were scrapped together by Boyington and didn't go through formal unit training in the US. They gave him the name Pappy, due to his age and the way he looked after them. His squadron shot down a confirmed 97 Japanese aircraft, 35 probable, 50 damaged, 21 destroyed on the ground. Pappy was shot down and thought dead, hence his Medal of Honor being awarded at the time "posthumously." He spent 20 months in a POW camp. In the 1970's, he sold his story to NBC who created the TV show The Black Sheep Squadron.

Doss, due to religious beliefs, refused to kill or even carry a weapon. He had voluntarily enlisted so as to serve his country, and remained though mocked and nearly given a Section eight. Doss was a medic, braving enemy fire to help the wounded, friendly or enemy, soldiers. On May 5, the Japanese made a fierce counter-attack which forced the troop back to the top of a cliff. Those not wounded had retreated down the cliff. Doss remained at the top, and for five hours, prayed and lowered wounded down to relative safety. The official number saved is 75, however, some assert it was 100 and Doss claims 50. On May 21st, Doss stepped on an enemy grenade and was severely wounded, though he didn't lose his leg. When the medics were taking him from the field, they passed another critically wounded soldier. Doss rolled off the litter and told the medics to take the other man. He then joined another wounded soldier and began hobbling off the field. Doss was shot in the arm he had around the other man's neck- it shattered his arm, but saved the other man's life. When he discovered his bible missing, he sent word back, and asked if they would keep an eye open for it. The battalion scoured the battlefield until it was found and mailed it back to Doss. Doss was the first noncombatant to ever receive the Medal of Honor.

V1269	MacDonald, Jeffrey		Former Green Beret who became a physician. February 17, 1970 MacDonald called the MPs for assistance. When they arrived, they found his two daughters and wife dead by bludgeoning and stabbing. Jeffrey, wounded and with a collapsed lung, told the MPs three men and a woman had committed the crime. The investigator in charge believed MacDonald was solely behind the attack, even with evidence of multiple individuals. When the poor investigation was brought to light in the trial, the case against MacDonald was dismissed, though not forgotten. 1975, the now well respected doctor was indicted through rather hazy means. Evidence was held back from the defense team and restrictions placed on its handling and testing. Two individuals even came forward about their presence at murder, but that information was downplayed or simply not presented to the jury. Even the judge seemed to be siding with the prosecution. MacDonald was painted as a monster through testimony and evidence, some of which was withheld outright and others tampered. The jury found him guilty and he was sentenced to three life terms. The book Fatal Vision also portrays MacDonald as a monster, though the author seemed more interested in what would sell than the truth of the case. MacDonald sued the author for fraud but the trial ended in mistrial and MacDonald settled for $325,000. Through the nineties, the case has been touched on and they are still trying to prove MacDonald's innocence
